Purpose

The task for this challenging training game is to construct a self-supporting bridge, using only the 24 sticks provided. No other equipment is allowed and it must support a one kilogram weight.

This team did well, but a much greater distance can be achieved. How far can your team go?

How It Works

- Participants start construction of the bridge, beginning at both ends. The bridge brings them closer together as the two parts of the bridge become one.
- The key factors for success are coordination, cooperation and adjustment (as regards the method of construction) between the two subgroups.
- It is vital the team thinks first because in the excitement and momentum of solving problems, buying resources and seeing your bridge materialise, it is hard to keep cool.
- This challenging construction game is easily adapted to focus on different key skills, such as leadership and teamwork.

Benefits for Your Organisation

- Experience time management and leadership skills
- Focus on effective planning and consideration of all options available
- Effective communication
- Lively and fun structured learning activity creating team cooperation
- Learning from analysis.

Supplied with the Game

- Trainer's guide – full instructions on how to run the game and how to achieve the best results, including debriefing guidance.
- Team Briefs – three different options to run the game.
- Materials to build the bridge and mark the stream

Comments from Building The Bridge Business Game

"A great exercise: challenging but fun. It made us work as a team and proved that spending more money is not always the answer."

"The Bridge game was a real challenge. At first we thought it was difficult; then we came up with an answer and went for it. On reflection we should have considered more options before building it. We learnt so much from this game."

"Everyone was fully involved and time was up before we finished. We had a good leader but no-one kept a note of the time. Ideal for project groups, new teams and junior management."
